A Message from the Dean

---

Dear Graduates,

I want to offer you my sincerest congratulations—not only for your laudable academic accomplishments but for the courage, resiliency, and compassion with which you have responded to the turbulent circumstances and dramatic changes thrust upon you this past semester. While all of us have been profoundly affected by the COVID-19 pandemic and the widespread efforts to curtail its effects, here in the College of Fine Arts and Communications we have been especially humbled by your efforts to press ahead toward your educational goals despite unprecedented disruptions and daunting challenges. Many of you have had to move long distances with short notice; you have had to adapt on the fly to unfamiliar learning platforms and technologies; performances have been canceled, postponed, or even held alone in empty halls or living rooms, with just a smartphone for an audience. And yet you have adapted, rolled with the punches, and pushed through. It is a testament not just to your talent and hard work but to your integrity of spirit. How I wish we could gather together in person with your families, friends, loved ones, and mentors to celebrate this unique accomplishment!

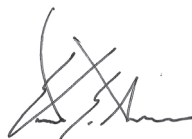

Instead I must convey my congratulations here, in this commemorative program for the convocation ceremonies we had hoped to have. We appreciate the wisdom of religious and civic leaders who have counseled that we protect each other by isolating ourselves from each other physically. But this is a hard thing. Not only does it hinder our ability to recognize your fine work, but it goes against the very nature of the disciplines in our college: so much of what makes us who we are as artists and storytellers and scholars is the conviction that the things we do have a special capacity to bring people together. I hope that this experience, difficult as it is, will strengthen your resolve to use the things you have learned at BYU to collapse all the distances that separate people: distances between communities, cultures, life experiences, and perspectives.

Our college prides itself on our student-centered convocation ceremonies. The “ceremonial” parts are undertaken with reverence, respect, and efficiency. That is because we always want to devote as much time as possible to spotlighting the work of the graduates through presentations and performances. We enlist your departments to help us select a handful of peers from your graduating class to represent the incredible ambition and creativity that all of our graduates must attain. This year, in absence of an in-person ceremony highlighting selected students, we wish to widen the spotlight with a virtual gathering that we have dubbed “Share Your Story: #CFACGrad.” Please visit convocation.byu.edu, where you can share the story of your education and help us celebrate the stories of your classmates.

As a first-generation college graduate myself (whose mother treasured my BYU convocation program throughout her life! I have it in my office!), I understand the disappointment you surely felt to learn that you would not be able to assemble in the HFAC tunnel with your classmates, don your caps and gowns, and walk across the stage, beaming, to receive your diploma. Please know that this disappointment does not diminish your academic accomplishments nor your potential to go out and change the world for good. It seems clear that the events that have disrupted our campus this year are going to likewise transform all of us, as global citizens, in profound ways. And while these events have taken from us our day of celebration, I am confident that as you go out into this new and different world, the lessons you learned and the people you have become at BYU will empower you to impel this changing world toward progress, justice, faith, and joy.

May God bless you in this effort.

Sincerely,

Ed Adams
Dean, College of Fine Arts and Communications

Share Your Story: #CFACGrad

Join our virtual celebration to celebrate graduates of the College of Fine Arts and Communications

Celebrate your BYU experience by sharing your story with us this graduation. The #CFACGrad campaign highlights graduating seniors through essays, memories, videos, photos, and artwork from your time at BYU.

We encourage everyone to use #CFACGrad in posts that celebrate graduates' BYU experiences, and we will share these entries online via web and social media to recognize the hard work and accomplishments of our amazing grads.
