“...for a learner and for a community of learners, [the] keeping of commitments has special significance.”

PRESIDENT HENRY B. EYRING

.................................

This project is a visual representation of commitments made by students and faculty from the College of Fine Arts and Communications to improve learning and teaching.

The purpose of this project is to provide a place where commitments can be made, viewed, shared, and added upon, with the hopes of forging a learning and teaching community within the college during the 2013-2014 school year.

.................................

TO PARTICIPATE, PLEASE FOLLOW THESE STEPS:

1. Consider a way you will contribute to learning and teaching this school year.
2. Pick up one of the 3x5 cards provided and write your commitment on one side. Your commitment can be a goal, scripture, quote, or image.
3. “Own” your card by choosing one of the stamp designs. Stamp your card on the opposite side of where you wrote your commitment, sign your name and write in your department or school in the appropriate places designated by the stamp.
4. Place your commitment card in the wire basket—the boards with pockets are now full.
5. Go the extra mile and post your commitment online to our CFAC Learning and Teaching Commitment Project page. You can take a picture of your commitment card, or write your commitment on one of the chalkboards provided and have someone take your picture holding your commitment as shown in the examples at the far right. After taking the picture, go to pizza.byu.edu to get instructions on how to upload your picture and commitment, or to participate in other related activities.

.................................

The CFAC Learning and Teaching Commitment Project is sponsored by the

CFAC DEAN’S OFFICE